DECREES

ART. 1 – SELECTION FOR AWARDING 1 (ONE) POSTDOCTORAL POSITION CONTRACT

This document announces the selection process IpD37/2026 for the formulation of a ranking for the awarding of n. 1 postdoctoral position contract in the scientific-disciplinary group GSD 10/GLOT-01 THEORIES AND HISTORY OF LANGUAGES, in the scientific-disciplinary sector SSD GLOT-01/A - Historical and General Linguistics, to perform the research on the topic "Comparative syntax of Indo-European subordination, (FIS-2024-05348)", financed by the Ministry of the University and Research under the program "Fondo Italiano per la Scienza (FIS3) 2024-2025", FIS-2024-05348, CUP B53C25004210001.

The research program concerns (description of the research program within which the postdoctoral position contract holder will work): the research consists in a comparative analysis of annotated syntactic structures to infer earlier linguistic stages and system evolution. The milestones involve the systematic comparison of the syntactic phenomena identified and annotated across the selected corpora and language traditions, with particular attention to patterns of subordination, clause linkage, and dependency relations within the Ancient Indo-European languages. By integrating synchronic and diachronic perspectives, the analysis aims to identify recurrent structural configurations, evaluate their distribution across different grammatical systems, and assess their historical development. The comparison of the annotated data will provide a basis for reconstructing earlier linguistic stages, intermediate subsystems, and possible pathways of syntactic change. Special attention will be paid to the interaction between formal structures and grammatical functions, allowing the identification of continuities and innovations within and across traditions. The results will contribute to a more refined understanding of language change and the evolution of syntactic systems both of the Indo-European Proto-language and the historic sister languages.

The purpose of the assignment that will be entrusted to the postdoctoral position contract holder will be (description of the activities that the postdoctoral position contract will have to carry out during the duration of the contract): the computational linguist will contribute to the development of the project's digital infrastructure through the design and implementation of tools for the annotation, management, and analysis of linguistic data relating to ancient Indo-European languages. Responsibilities will include the development of annotation models for syntactic structures, with particular focus on subordination, dependency relations, and clause linkage; the design of a relational and hypertextual database integrating linguistic, terminological, bibliographic, and philological data; the development of procedures for data querying and validation; support for quantitative and statistical analyses (including the use of R); the creation of tools for data visualization and cross-linguistic comparison; and the development of open-access digital resources compliant with the FAIR principles and reusable by the wider research community.

The postdoctoral position contract will have a duration of thirty-six months.

Admission to the selection process, and the selection procedure itself, are governed by the following Articles.
