DECREES

ART. 1 – SELECTION FOR AWARDING 1 (ONE) POSTDOCTORAL POSITION CONTRACT

This document announces the selection process IpD15/2026 for the formulation of a ranking for the awarding of n. 1 postdoctoral position contract in the scientific-disciplinary group GSD 06/MEDS-26 METHODS IN LABORATORY MEDICINE, TECHNICAL DIAGNOSTIC, ASSISTANCE, PREVENTION AND REHABILITATION HEALTH PROFESSION SCIENCES, ADVANCED MEDICAL AND SURGICAL TECHNOLOGY AND METHODOLOGY, scientific-disciplinary sector SSD MEDS-26/A - Biotechnology and Methods in Laboratory Medicine, to perform the research on the topic "Understanding stress-response reprogramming in pancreatic cancer to identify druggable trade-offs", funded by AIRC IG2023-28801, CUP B37G23000750007.

The research program concerns (description of the research program within which the postdoctoral position contract holder will work): this project aims to improve outcomes for patients with pancreatic ductal adenocarcinoma (PDAC) by elucidating the mechanisms that confer resilience and hardiness to pancreatic cancer cells in adverse microenvironments. Two central questions are addressed: how PDAC cells evolve toward aggressive phenotypes in response to multiple microenvironmental stresses, and how stress-response pathways engaged by RAS–MAPK inhibition can be therapeutically exploited. The project integrates unbiased and hypothesis-driven approaches using in vitro (cell lines and organoids) and in vivo (orthotopic transplantation, metastatic models) models. Candidate biomarkers and gene signatures will be validated in clinically annotated PDAC cohorts. Integrated transcriptomic and chromatin accessibility analyses of patient-derived organoids exposed to defined stressors will enable the identification of stress-responsive loci and transcriptional networks that promote PDAC cell hardiness. The functional validation of the targets will avail of in vitro CRISPR/Cas9 screens and mechanistic studies to uncover novel potential vulnerabilities.

The purpose of the assignment that will be entrusted to the postdoctoral position contract holder will be (description of the activities that the postdoctoral position contract holder will have to carry out during the duration of the contract): the postdoctoral position contract holder will generate RNA-seq and ATAC-seq data on tumor organoid cultures subjected to stress conditions (e.g., hypoxia, extracellular matrix rigidity), with the ultimate goal of identifying transcriptional networks that are activated under stress conditions and that underlie phenotypic adaptation. In a subsequent phase, the postdoctoral position contract holder will use gene disruption systems (e.g., CRISPR/Cas9, shRNA) to orthogonally validate the functional relevance of the identified molecules. Functional validation also includes in vivo testing using mouse models. The postdoctoral fellow's duties also include supporting the writing of scientific articles, administrative reports, and research projects.

The postdoctoral position contract will have a duration of twelve months, with the possibility of extension in accordance with the law.
Admission to the selection process, and the selection procedure itself, are governed by the following Articles.
