Short CV
Brief description of the outstanding academic achievements to date

Denis Delfitto graduated in Philosophy at the University of Pisa in 1985 and earned the "Diploma in Humanities" at the Scuola Normale Superiore (Pisa) in 1985 (curriculum: Logic and Formal Linguistics). He earned a PhD in General Linguistics at the Scuola Normale Superiore (Pisa) in 1990 (title of the doctoral dissertation: "Generics and Variables in Syntax").

From 1990 to 2001 he was Associate Professor of Italian Linguistics at the Utrecht University. From 1996 to 2001 he coordinated the syntax/semantics research group at the Utrecht Institute of Linguistics (UiL-OTS).

Since November 2001 he is Full Professor in General Linguistics at the Faculty of Humanities of the University of Verona, where he has teaching assignments (at Bachelor, Master and PhD level) in formal syntax and semantics, philosophy of language and semiotics.

From 2005 to 2011 he has been Vice-rector for International Relations at the University of Verona, and in the years 2013-2014 Vice-Rector for Teaching and Learning. Since 2019 he has been holding the function of Vice-Rector for the Evaluation and Impact of Research at the university of Verona.

He engaged in a number of original and innovative research programs on the modes of reference in natural language, the morphology/semantics interface (Romance/Germanic compounding), the semantics of tense, aspect and noun-phrases, several issues at the syntax/semantics interface characterized by an interdisciplinary dimension (especially with the philosophy of mind and cognitive and brain sciences), such as the investigation of 'expletive' uses of negation in exclamative and temporal clauses and the investigation of the nature of first-personal thoughts (de se / de re ambiguities, immunity to error through misidentification) across different types of syntactic structures.

He organized many international workshops and conferences on several of these research subjects. He was invited to teach in many Italian universities at the Master and PhD level, and to teach Master and PhD courses in many renowned European universities. He was speaker or invited speaker at many international conferences in theoretical linguistics. He supervised dozens of PhD research projects, in such different fields as comparative syntax and semantics, computational linguistics and clinical linguistics and was a member of many PhD thesis committees in several countries (including France, the Netherlands and Switzerland). He also developed conjoined scientific programs at PhD-level with non-Italian universities, including Utrecht and Bordeaux.

He participated or is participating in funded research projects on the origin of language, the production of the Blackwell Encyclopedia of Syntactic Case Studies (financed by the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Studies), the comparative syntax of noun-phrases in Bantu, Chinese and Romance (financed by the Dutch Research Council), long-distance syntactic dependencies and linguistic diversity (financed by the Italian Ministry of Education among the research projects of national interest (PRIN)), bilingualism and atypical linguistic development (Seventh European Research Framework (Cooperation): "Project acronym: AThEME; Project full title: "Advancing the European Multilingual Experience (AthEme)"; grant agreement

no. 613465, financed in 2013 by the European Commission). He has been PI in the research project "How to enhance employability in fragile-literacy groups: testing an integrated psycho-linguistic intervention model", funded by the Fondazione Cariverona (Ricerca Scientifica di Eccellenza 2018). He is currently involved in two distinct PRIN projects (Research Projects of National Relevance), in one case as PI and responsible for the three research units involved.

His publications include a high number of scientific contributions in international scientific journals and peer-reviewed volumes. His research interests include the history of logic, the investigation of themes at the interface between linguistics and the philosophy of language and philosophy of mind, the study of quantification in natural language, the syntax and semantics of pronominal dependencies, the syntax of reference and the ontology of natural language, issues of language change and language pathology, issues in Romance/Germanic comparative syntax and semantics, foundational syntactic issues concerning the relation between linear order and hierarchy in language, experimental studies with the AGL paradigm.

He is in the Editorial Board of some leading international journals in linguistics (among which Linguistic Inquiry), and acted or acts as a reviewer for almost 20 scientific journals and internationally renowned publishers. He is also a reviewer for several grant-giving organizations, including the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research, the French National Research Agency, the Flemish Organization for Scientific Research and the Italian Agency for Research Projects of National Interest, and for many renowned international conferences. Along the years, he has fulfilled many important functions at the academic and professional service level. Since 2017, he is a member of the Academia Europaea.
