I have been studying ancient polytheistic religions since my first M.Sc. degree in Classics, with a special focus on archeological sources and from an anthropological perspective. The results of my first M.Sc. thesis and of my Ph.D. dissertation were published by L'Erma di Bretschneider and Scienze e Lettere (Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei). After a career break (during which I taught in middle and high school), I went back to the academia as MSCA Cofund Fellow at the Max-Weber-Kolleg (University of Erfurt). On the occasion of the IAHR World Congress in 2015, I started a long-lasting collaboration with a Swiss-Canadian scholar, Florence Pasche Guignard, to develop the epistemological key-tenets of a subfield of gender studies at the intersection between Motherhood Studies and Religious Studies (published in Numen - Brill). On this topic, I published a monograph, edited two collective volumes, and I organized a cycle of three International Workshops entitled Religionification of Motherhood and Mothers' Appropriation of Religion. The results were published as proceedings and a selection of them was published in a Special Issue 2020 of Open Theology (De Gruyter). I am currently working on votive religion in ancient Italy; the results have been publishing in a two-volume book entitled Votive Statuettes of Adult/s and Infant/s in Ancient Italy from the End of the 7th to 3rd c. BCE: A New Reading (Arbor Sapientiae).

Languages: Italian (mother tongue), English (H1=C1 and Academic writing), French (B1), German (B2), and Spanish (basic).
